Sueno

About our Courses

The Pines Course

The Pines is the Championship Course of the Sueno Golf Club and lies on the east side of the complex. The course is famous with its undulated challenging surface. The Course is Par 72 and has a total route distance of 6413 meters.

11 beautiful Lake parts are crossing the Fairways of this Course and completing the natural layout for maximum satisfaction.

The 76 natural Bunkers which 30 of them are on the Greenside, targets to challenge every Golfer.

The 5th Holes (Houlstons Folly) with the tough turn, the 9th Hole (Lands end) with the tricky Island Green and the impassable Sand hazard on the 13th Holes (Rugged Valley) are just a couple of the signature Holes that every Golfer will remember.

The Dunes Course

The Dunes is the second Course at direction southwest which is attached to the Pines and to the Sueno Golf Hotel. The Course feels friendlier but the layout and the tricky Greens are promising nothing less than the Pines Course. The Course is Par 69 and has a total route distance of 5643 meters.

8 designed lake parts are crossing many holes of Dunes to combine green and blue for a perfect atmosphere. 54 Bunkers, including 2 confusing waste bunkers are placed on the way to the finish.

Even after 17 lucky holes, you might want to stop and think before you approach the last hole on the Island green to finish your day on the Dunes Course.

Hole by Hole - The Pines

A long and generous fairway gives the player a change to get the swing warmed up. A well protected green requires the player to have struck two good shots so that they might have a good chance of negotiating the 2 aggressive greenside bunkers.

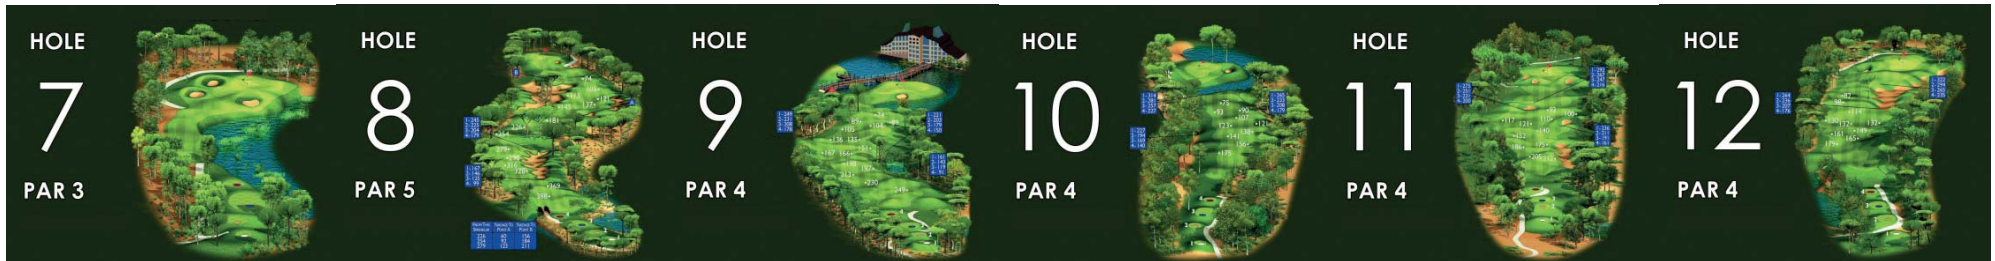

A relatively easy par 4, only a poor drive might find the fairway bunkers short and left. The player must get as close to the lakes as possible to lessen the severity of the greens approach and only a well struck mid-iron will hold this contoured green.

At just 160 yards off the championship tees this hole offers a picturesque shot over a lake to a peninsula green. The player has a commanding view of all its hazards. Be warned for all its beauty Little Gem will punish any shot that is too far left.

With four bunkers restricting the length of the tee shot this par 4 puts the long and short hitters onto an even footing. A well played tee shot will give the golfer a shot in from the right hand-side of the fairway.

Winner of a national competition this innovative Par 4 is the brain child of Mark Houlston. In contrast to hole 4 the course is becoming a little more difficult. The horse shoe step will ensure that all who play this hole will remember it.

The 6th is nestled in amongst majestic pine trees and first pours down the hillside to an amphitheatre green. 6 bunkers waiting to punish wayward shots, whilst those brave enough can cut the dogleg and save precious yards from the approach.

This long par 3 requires a carry of 160 yards over water. A diagonal green with diagonal bunkers ensures that even the very best players will be satisfied with a Par.

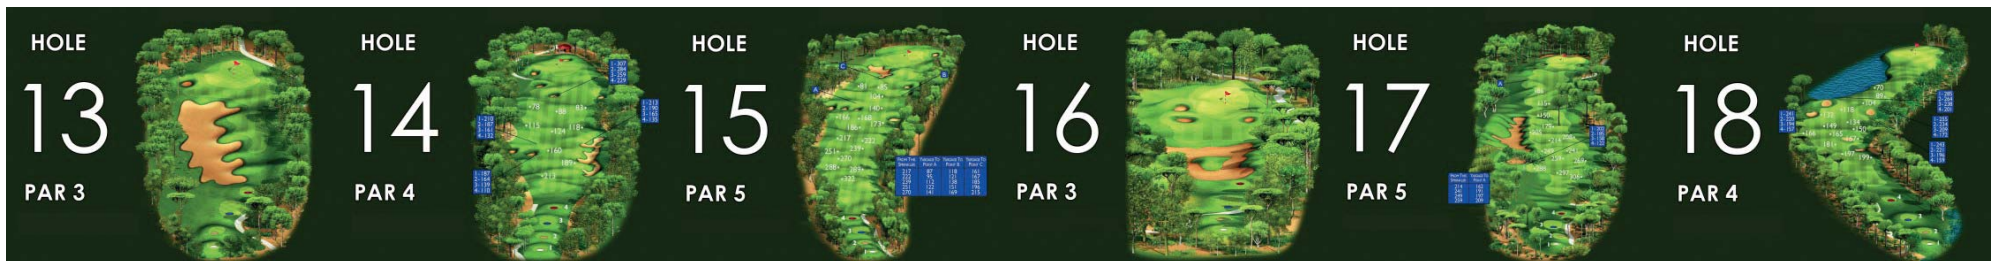

Hole 8 is a double dogleg monster of a Par 5. From the tee the golfer must avoid the waste bunker. Once round the Pine the second shot must be pin point accurate to set the approach for a narrow entry into a green cosseted by a pine forest.

Doglegging right this long Par 4 terminates with a peninsula green. With a high banking fairway to the left a low draw will make the most of the undulations. The second have to carry water and it takes a steady nerve to negotiate this.

A short Par 4 the 10th hole will kick start the back 9. The wide and unguarded fairway forgives most tee shots, but the ideal line will be on the left hand-side. A birdie opportunity, the 10th is a players favourite.

A straight and long Par 4 the 11th hole invites the player to skirt the side of the waste bunker if they wish to open up the green to an inviting shot. Straying left on the tee compounds the problems of the subsequent shots.

Set in amongst Veteran Pines trees this rolling par 4 plays into a green surrounded by majestic trees. The aggressive player will skirt the waste bunker as much as they dare to increase the angle of opportunity to the green.

Hewn through a valley, playing over a waste bunker Hole 13 is a visual delight. The table top green will welcome the traditional bump and run approach whilst repelling the aerial shot. Birdie hunters will welcome this hole.

A glorious vista to the Toros Mountains greets the golfer on the 14th tee. A long and straight tee shot is required on this Par 4 whilst a diagonal group of bunker cross the fairway punishing weaker shots to the green.

A mammoth Par 5, is surrounded is encapsulated on all sides by pines. The drive is wide open but the closed the golfer gets to the green the tighter the fairway becomes until a waste bunker wraps around the front left of the approach.

Playing over the waster bunker it shares with 15, hole 16 is a medium par 3 into a devilish two tier green; just don't land on the wrong tier.

Playing from an elevated tee Hole 17 is a bumpy ride. A potential birdie opportunity for the bigger hitters, the ideal line is a draw followed by a fade to open up the approach and avoid the fairway bunkers.

From the tee the 18th is a visual illusion, giving the golfer the feelings that he has almost no space to land his drive, however when he reaches his drive he'll find the space opens up.

Hole by Hole—The Dunes

An easy opening Par 4 is a sharp dogleg left. The intelligent approach is played directly at the mound the right of the green stunning the shot and letting it roll toward the pin. Finding the bunker will almost certainly add strokes to the card.

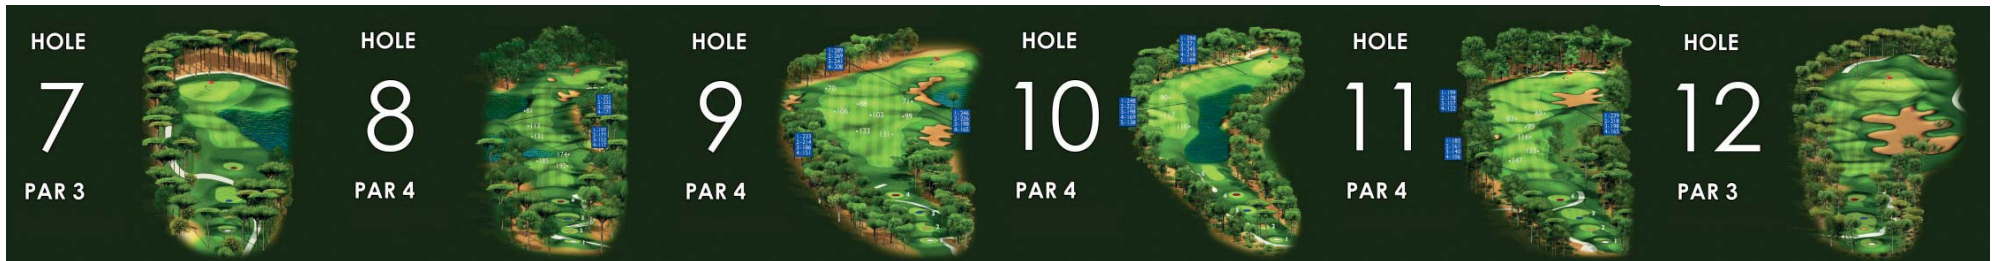

For those brave enough to play for the right hand strip will not only gain length but will have an unguarded approach into the green.

This medium length par 4 is dominated by the tiger claw bunker at the heart of its fairway which splits the tee shot. Doglegging right the ideal position from the tee is on the left to open up the well guarded green.

A short par 3 skirted by water and surrounded by bunkers hole 22 is all about symmetry. Anything less than a well struck shot is sure to be rejected by the green.

A long and straight par 4, the golfer from the tee must be confident, otherwise the two fairway bunkers either side will catch a hook or slice. To make the best of the green the drive needs to land on the left-hand-side of the fairway.

A breather hole, this mid Par 4 hides a waste bunker far out to the right. Once the golfer plays through the valley the entire hole opens up to an inviting green which is set within a lake.

Playing down to this Par 3 presents a tough challenge thanks in no small part to a dominant Eucalyptus tree which is protecting the green, and if that isn't enough the green is surrounded on the right by water.

A difficult hole for the short hitter, the drive has to carry water and avoid a further lake to the left and a fairway bunker to the right. The heavily shaped green requires a right to left shot otherwise the slope might just reject the shot.

What this short Par 4 lacks in distance it makes up with the difficulty of the approach chip. A tight drive gives way to a lake side green, the wise player will prefer the left-hand-side of the fairway to avoid the carry over water.

This strategic hole ask for accuracy from the tee, try to cut the dogleg too much and you bring the bunkers into play. If struck well the player is rewarded with a commanding view of the green for the approach.

This short Par 4 hole plays through a big valley, a shorter hole but by no means easy it is heavily protect by a greenside waste bunker hole 29 has a tricky green but still a great birdie opportunity.

Take a rest - a medium Par 3, which is very birdie-able but to get there you have to carry a cavernous waste bunker, be wary of the pimple protecting the greens entrance.

A medium Par 5 this is an energy sapping hole. Shots on the right hand side run the risk of kicking further right and finding the waste bunker. It possible making the green reachable in two but only with the very best of shots.

This dogleg Par 4 is partially protected by mounding. A drive as close to the inside of the dogleg as possible gives the best angle into the green but the bunkers on the mound looks very dangerous. Don't be put off.

A medium Par 4, this is a simple drive but the short shot will be heavily penalised by six strategic fairway bunkers. The danger isn't over yet as the golfer is faced with one of the most difficult greens on the course.

This Par 4 is short but it's certainly not easy. With trouble on the left of the green the player must hold the tricky green to realistically hope for a par. The longer hitters will be looking to hit this in one.

A little harder – this tricky par 3 has hidden ground between the fairway bunker and the green, be sure to take plenty of club and stay away from the greenside bunker.

A great finishing hole, this is a straight drive but plays to the greatest feature on the golf course; the island green. With the clubhouse in the background this hole is difficult to forget and if you drop a shot in the lake you wont be the first!
